I work hard and dedicate myself entirely to everything I choose to do whether it be singing jazz, classical music or songwriting. I've been lucky enough to have been around the world with my music and I draw influences from everything I've learned, seen and done. But when it gets right down to it, no matter which style of music I am focusing on, everything breaks down to the communication of our purest emotions. In my songwriting, all of my lyrics are rooted in real life experiences I've had first hand. I then take the emotions from those experiences and extend them out in a way that I hope people can relate to them in the simplest way possible.
